AMUSEMENTS. Thanksgiving Day at the Theaters.

A familiar scrap of Latin verse tells us, with equal beauty of thought and terse significance of diction, that to labor is to pray. By parity of reas-oning, to enjoy is to give thanks. To-day, then, which is set apart as a season of grateful jubilee, ought, therefore, to witness the thorough improvement of all sorts of opportunities for real pleasure. There will, of tention: and, since the great pressure of political matter upon these columns has, within a few days past, of the salient points of the novel-the triumph

A man is, according to all law, to be held accomplished for his own acts, and feter strong must be held responsible in the eye of the law for the infidelity of his wife, if she has been guilty of such, which we deny. But suppose all this trumped-up story to be true, what is his conduct and what is the conduct of his family toward this brother, who has thus brought eternal disgreece and supped eternal infamy upon the forehead of him such his children! What would be the feelings of a man object honor, and what would they prompt him to do? Why high honor, and what would they prompt that to a in the eye of the law, a man is not guily of marker the destreyer of the wife's wittee when he finds that and such men have been again and gain acquited by murder. But look at this case. Does the he the destr. yer of his wife's virtue when he finds him in the act, and such men have been again and rgain acquitted by juries of murder. But book at this case. Does the brother or the family repudiate this brother who had disgraced them! Very far from it. They virt him, they make presents to him, and Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Strong go to Darien, one hour and a half's ride by the New-Haven Railrond, to see him and shake his polinted hand. Why should they not have said: "Feter, this man has disgraced you and us, let us forever out him off, but in place of doing this they concent to manage his property, receive the runts of his estate, transmit them to him, and now only await your verdict to again welcome him, back to the family homestesd, the destroyer of his brother's honor, the friend who has blasted a woman's reputation forever, and that woman his own stater-in-law. Why, the thing is unparabled in any country, and in any age. While he disgraced the uniform of the United States, beneath which he closed his treacherous breast, they welcome him, and, as one of the witnesses here testified, received him with open arms. I want to knew, gentlemen, if all this does a look as if this pure child was to be ascrined by this fam and all at the shrine of their avarice? The avarice of if family is so great that they are ready to go and talk with hevery time they can get a chance. I sked the counsel if was going to put this inflamous brother on the stand, and replied indignantly that he would manage his own case as asw fit. My object was to show you that he dered not should have a cross-examination. It looks as if there were a compliancy in this case. The have not dared to give you the whole of the testimon here. Something has been held back. They removed fro place its place. They had servants everywhere and yet the do not produce them. If you strike out the confessions, and will show you that you ought, it all turns on the evidence the governess. She appeared here a willing witness, with great deady for modesty. Counsel then reviewed the testimon of Matikle, stating that she lived in Hoboken and came he to volunter testimony; this was a most extraordinary thin, all along also proves herself an agent in the business, and he evidence great the received with great caution. The objec-tions which we have, made to this play, on the score of taste, have-in qu'arters wherein meanness and malignity are previent and controlling motives-been wrested into bjections to its moral teachings. This has been done, with the design (happily impotent!) of causing 'njury to the thester in which this piece is now enjoying so successful a run. We take occasion, therefore, to say that the moral lesson that is taught by "Lost in London," is wholly unexceptionable. Regarded with a view to what it tenches, the drama merits the warmest possible commendation. Whether that lesson of conjugal fidelity needs to be taught, and whether the incidents of the teaching be in good taste, are questions concerning which opinions tinetly stated; but we should be sorry to have any intelligent person deceived by perversion and misrepresentation of our judgments. Such per-version and misrepresentation are to be expected, so long as the profession of journalism is disgraced by persons who have neither honor, delicacy nor decency of mind, but are solely actuated by low, copper the construction of mind, but are solely actuated by low, malignant cumning in the pursuit of mercenary aims. The company here is a large Haideé, is equally charming. These parts being well one, and comprises extremely various talents. We filled, the rest may be tolerated. Perfection in a cast have already noted the special design of this troups, is not to be expected. "Monte Christo" was, as we which is to illustrate the Minstreley of all nations. It have already noticed, performed years ago at the old is a felicitous design, and its accomplishment is the Broadway Theater, under the supervision of Mr. Lester occasion of much pleasantry. "Retribution, or the Wallack; but we doubt if it was ever better produced Fall of Humbur," is just the chief feature in the than it now is at the Olympic. It will assuredly hold entertainment of to-day. The evening perfermance heing of a brighter sphere. Her eyes were of liquid softness, than it now is as the Olympic, her forshead large and cit at, her countenance of angelic purity, mysterio-edy becutiful. Around her head a fold of the stage for a very long time, commences at 71 o'clock.
